Direction: Read the following passage and answer the questions by choosing the best | choice (1), (2), (3), or (4).
Then mark the correct choice on your answer sheet.

Ocean exploration was hampered by the conditions below the surface. The tremendous pressure of the water would crush an unprotected, diver water temperature on the ocean floor was not inviting either. Vents, or openings, on the ocean floor have temperatures as high as 254°F (254 degrees Fahrenheit) or 123°C (123 degrees Celsius). To explore below the surface of the ocean, humans needed special equipment. Early diving suits from the late eighteenth century and early nineteenth century were not very useful. One type enclosed the diver's body in a cylinder, making it difficult to move around. A later type of diving suit replaced the large cylinder with a heavy metal helmet. Air from above the surface traveled through a tube into the helmet. These early diving suits allowed people to descend fifty feet below the ocean surface for about an hour.

In 1872, the first ship equipped for ocean set out on a four-year trip

Around the world. The ship had two laboratories, and it carried the most advanced scientific equipment of the time. Scientists on the ship tested the temperature and density of sea water. They gathered information about ocean

Currents and meteorology. They discovered an underwater mountain chain and more than 4,000 new species. The results of this expedition encouraged interest in exploring farther below the ocean surface. To do this, however, divers needed better equipment to protect them from the pressure of water.

22) Which of the following can be inferred from paragraph 1?

- 1) The oceans were important to humans.
- 2) The ocean has always been a frightening place.
- 3) It wasn't easy for early sailors to explore the oceans.
- 4) Early sailors were not aware of the dangers of ocean exploration.

23) According to the passage, early diving suits

- 1) were made of metal
- 2) Were tubes fifty feet long.
- 3) would only cover the diver's head .

4) made it impossible for diver's breathe under the sea.

24) the word "expedition" in paragraph 3 is closest in meaning to

1) development

2) journey

3) experiment

4) experience

25) According to paragraph 3, what was important about the 1872 scientific trip?

1) It aroused interest in deep-sea exploration.

2) It was the longest trip around the world.

3) The scientists found a way to bring the pressure of water under control.

4) Diving equipment allowed the scientists to take pictures of new sea animals.
